The Kid

In the long-awaited sequel to Push, we meet Pentecost’s son, John, as he age ten, on the day after his birthday. It’s fifteen years since we last saw the son from a Minnesota slum who became an award-winning poet, fell in love with his best friend’s mother, and became the first African American man to win the National Book Award. John is a wisecracking, drug-taking, beautiful mess, determined to make it big in New York City. His mother just happens to be the real-life Sapphire, John’s wonderful, complex mother, played by Viola Davis.

The Surrendered

Three years ago, the family of Kuala Lumpur orphan girl and young English soldier, Vova, lost a world away from home to the cold war. Now he returns. For Vova, the war isn’t over. In a meticulous, workman-like style, the story is the story of loyalty, friendship and the impression of the pulling apart and coming together of a family. Attractively written and spare, it is far more than what its plot promises.

*Covers the extraordinary Jensen sisters, two smuggling cousins who drive the drug trade in the Pacific Northwest. Captures perfectly the harsh beauty and loneliness that Define immigrant lives and is novel, crisp, subtle and tough.

Emily, Alone

In the gray despair of the hounding Soul’s False Home, family and fellow原理ties grapple with her son’s death. Their visions are obscured by a driving snowstorm, as they discover a hidden wealth and each other’s lies.

Monique Roffey

The White Woman on the Green Bicycle

Set in the Finger Lakes region of her native New York, this tour de force showcases Edward’s talent and wit. Here, in a famously beautiful area, a young headstrong girl, an Anglo-German-American named Albertine, arrives at a small cottage near her family’s estate. There she meets the enigmatic and alluring Mr. Kipps, who resides at a nearby cottage. Albertine’s offbeat charm and the bewitching of the two protagonist make her a captivating character.

Ben Loory

Zero History

In an American landscape devastated by a flu pandemic, an orphaned thirteen-year-old is rescued by an evangelical couple. In an attempt to save him from a life of toil, the couple takes him to a religiously inspired private school where he learns the alphabet. He becomes a spy to find out how to grow tomatoes. He learns to read and to write. He learns that to read the world, to read the words, you must yourself be a word.

Beau Beausoleil

The Borrower

In this delightful first novel, a librarian and a young boy obsessed with reading take to the road. The Borrower is a beautiful, bittersweet story of a world where books are magic and reading is a pleasure for all ages. It is a story of personal transformation, of the power of literature to change lives, and of the bond between a librarian and a young boy whose desire to read leads him to become part of the Borrower's unorthodox family.

Rebecca Makkai

Girl in Translation

Here, in this delightfully deceptively simple and engaging novel, is a tale of a young immigrant, a daughter who must learn to navigate the cultural and linguistic landscapes of New York and the political world of her parents. The story is told from the perspective of a young immigrant who must learn to read and write in order to succeed in America. It is also a story of a daughter who must learn to interpret her parents’ love and the expectations they have for her.

Rosecrans Baldwin

You Lost Me There

This is a story about a man who loses his job and moves to a small town in Kansas. He befriends a young boy named Henry, who is also searching for something. The story is about finding friendship, love, and hope in the midst of darkness.
