Brené Brown, Ph.D., L.M.S.W.

DARING GREATLY

How the Courage to Be Vulnerable Transforms the Way We Live, Love, Parent, and Lead

Based on twelve years of research, Brown argues that vulnerability is not weakness and offers a powerful new vision that encourages us to embrace our imperfections. "An important book—a timely warning about the danger of pursuing certainty and control above all. Brené Brown offers all of us a valuable guide to the real reward of vulnerability: Greater courage."—Daniel H. Pink, author of Drive.

Todd G. Buchholz

RUSH

Why You Need and Love the Rat Race

A former White House director of economic policy makes the argument that we don't really want to relax—we want to compete. Weaving in everything from neuroeconomics to evolutionary biology, Buchholz shows that the race to compete has not only made us taller and smarter, it's what lights up our brains, releases dopamine, and ignites our passion.

Émile Durkheim

ON SUICIDE

Translated by Robin Buss

Introduction by Richard Sennett

Notes by Alexander Riley

Durkheim was the first to suggest that suicide might be as much a response to society as an act of individual despair. When he looked at social, religious, or racial groups that had high incidences of suicide, he discovered that abnormally high or low levels of social integration increase the likelihood of suicide.

Nassir Ghaemi

A FIRST-RATE MADNESS
Uncovering the Links Between Leadership and Mental Illness
Drawing from the careers of Lincoln, Churchill, Gandhi, Martin Luther King, Jr., and JFK, the director of the Mood Disorders Program at Tufts University Medical Center shows that the very qualities that mark those with mood disorders—realism, empathy, resilience, and creativity—also make for the best leaders in times of crisis. “Ghaemi isn’t the first to claim that madness is a close relative of genius, or even the first to extend the idea into politics. But he goes further than others....His explanations are elegant, too—intuitively accurate and banked off the latest psychiatric research.” —Newsweek.

Abraham H. Maslow

THE FARTHER REACHES OF HUMAN NATURE
Preface by Bretha G. Maslow

Introduction by Henry Geiger
In this extension of his classic Toward a Psychology of Being, Maslow explores the complexities of human nature by using both the empirical methods of science and the aesthetics of philosophical inquiry. With essays on biology, sympathy, creativity, cognition, self-actualization, and the hierarchy of needs, this posthumous work is a wide-ranging synthesis of Maslow’s inspiring and influential ideas.

Kelly McGonigal, Ph.D.

THE WILLPOWER INSTINCT
How Self-Control Works, Why It Matters, and What You Can Do to Get More of It
After years of watching her students struggling with their choices, the health psychologist realized that much of what people believe about willpower is actually sabotaging their success. In response, McGonigal created a course called “The Science of Willpower” for Stanford University. Here, she publishes her results and explains the new science of self-control and how it can be harnessed to improve our health, happiness, and productivity.

CLAude Lévi-Strauss
The Father of Modern Anthropology
The first English biography of Lévi-Strauss follows the intrepid anthropologist from the depths of Amazonia in the 1930s to postwar Paris, and offers an invaluable guide to his landmark works: Tristes Tropiques, a literary meditation on his travels and fieldwork; The Savage Mind, which showed that “primitive” people are driven by the same intellectual curiosities as their Western counterparts; and finally his four-volume Mythologiques, a study of the universal structures of native mythology in the Americas.

Claude Lévi-Strauss
TRISTES TROPICOUES
Translated by John Weightman and Doreen Weightman
Introduction by Patrick Wilcken
From the Amazon basin through the jungles of Brazil, Lévi-Strauss found societies reduced to their “most basic expression” among the Caduveo, Bororo, Nambikwara, and Tupi-Kawahib, in this milestone of the study of culture from the father of structural anthropology. Tristes Tropiques places the cultural practices of these peoples in a global context and extrapolates a fascinating theory of culture that has given the book an importance far beyond the fields of anthropology and conceptual philosophy.

A BORDER PASSAGE
From Cairo to America—A Woman’s Journey
Updated Edition
New Afterword on the Arab Spring
The professor of Women’s Studies and Religion at Harvard Divinity School reflects on her Egyptian childhood growing up in a rich tradition of Islamic women and describes how she eventually came to terms with her identity as a feminist living in America. “A moving and provocative memoir [that] breaks new ground in feminist and post-colonial literature. Ahmed takes us inside the life experience of a Muslim feminist, who is also an Egyptian-born, Cambridge-educated intellectual, and now a professor of women’s studies in America. Her nuanced attention to the shaping of identity in a world of ‘border passages’ is a monumental contribution.”—Diana L. Eck, Harvard University.

BLACK MILK
On the Conflicting Demands of Writing, Creativity, and Motherhood
Translated by Hande Zapsu
After the birth of her first child, the Turkish novelist suffered from postpartum depression and stopped writing. In this memoir, Shafak retraces her journey from free-spirited, nomadic artist to dedicated but emotionally wounded mother. As she intersperses her own experience with the lives of prominent authors such as Sylvia Plath, Virginia Woolf, Alice Walker, and Zelda Fitzgerald, she looks for a solution to the inherent conflict between artistic creation and responsible parenting.

THE HARBOR
Introduction by Patrick Chura
In the best-known novel by the winner of the first Pulitzer Prize for fiction, an aspiring writer struggles to reconcile his sympathy for workers with his middle-class allegiance to capitalist progress. “Harriet Beecher Stowe’s Uncle Tom’s Cabin, Frank Norris’s The Octopus and John Steinbeck’s The Grapes of Wrath are still readable and powerful enough to move the reader, but most other examples of American protest fiction must be soldiered through. To the small company of exceptions should be added The Harbor...which Penguin Classics has rescued from oblivion.”—Washington Post Book World.

Tens of thousands of American students are homeschooled. Growing at a rate of 10 percent annually, home-schooling represents the most dramatic change in American education since the invention of the microscope.

A year up
How a Pioneering Program Teaches Young Adults Real Skills for Real Jobs with Real Success
The founder and CEO of Year Up offers an intimate portrait of the innovative and intensive program that offers low-income young adults training, mentorship, internships, and ultimately real jobs—often with Fortune 500 companies. "Chertavian is one of America's leading pioneers for social change. Especially at a time of economic hardship, it is inspiring to read his story about Year Up, a dynamic social venture that is helping so many young people lift themselves up. I have long believed that social entrepreneurs are at the vanguard of a second civil rights movement—one that again seeks equal opportunity for all of our people."—David Gergen, Professor of Public Service, Harvard University Kennedy School of Government.

Professor X
In the Basement of the Ivory Tower
The Truth About College
This controversial book crystallizes the current debate over the value and purpose of a college education, written by an adjunct professor of English literature and composition—one of the poorly paid underclass who are teaching the vast majority of our college courses. "An indictment of American education at two levels: the high schools, for processing students who too often leave, diplomas in hand, with little better than ninth-grade educations, and the colleges, for the institutional greed that inspires them to matriculate ever more marginally qualified students while educating them on the cheap with part-time instructors of wildly varying competence."—The Washington Post.

Mike Rose
Lives on the Boundary
A Moving Account of the Struggles and Achievements of America’s Educationally Underprepared Afterward by the author
The award-winning account of how America’s educational system fails its students—and what can be done about it. "The best book I have read on American education."—The Boston Globe.

Ira Berlin
THE MAKING OF AFRICAN AMERICA
The Four Great Migrations
“Berlin broadens his focus, expanding and redefining the contours of African American history”—John David Smith, University of North Carolina at Charlotte. “In vigorous prose [Berlin] describes four great migrations...All of these movements were dislocating and painful. All unleashed creativity. And all shaped black life and culture.”—The Economist. “Explores the changes in culture, music, politics, social institutions, and economics that defined each movement and redefined African Americans. Berlin also explores the latest migration, tensions, and feelings of kinship between native-born African Americans and newcomers, and the ultimate impact on perceptions of what it means to be black in America.”—Booklist.
