Excellent Daughters
The Secret Lives of the Young Women Who Are Transforming the Arab World
2016
"Explor[es] the lives, experiences, and beliefs of young Muslim women in rapidly changing environments. Zoepf masterfully combines groundbreaking archival research with a genius for historical narrative, producing a vivid and compelling portrait of the lives of women. In this informed investigation, she brings us a new understanding of the modern Middle East as she tells the never-before-reported story of a generation of Muslim women from Egypt, Pakistan, and Indonesia who are redefining a world often governed by sharia law and male-dominated society. They are also challenging assumptions about their future, their role in society, and their place in history. Zoepf's book is a vital contribution to our understanding of Muslim women's roles and aspirations in the post-Islamic world. For those interested in the future of the Middle East, it is a must-read."—Amira El-Athl, New York Times Book Review

LAURA SECOR
Children of Paradise: The Struggle for the Soul of Iran
2016
Anyone who wants to understand the forces shaping post-revolutionary Iran will be shocked by the revelation that women have been at the forefront of many of the country's most violent conflicts. In the aftermath of the 1979 Islamic Revolution, the new Islamic Republic imposed gender segregation in public spaces, forced women to cover their faces, and made塞thnic women face the ultimate choice: wear the chador or face arrest and punishment. With more than a decade of experience reporting on the region, Secor narrates the history of Iran—the first revolutionary theocracy in modern times—as a story of individual survival and the resilience of the Iranian woman. She demonstrates that women played a crucial role in the uprising and that their participation was both instrumental and essential to the revolution's success. GERTRUDE BELL
A Woman in Arabia: The Writings of the Queen of the Desert
EDITED WITH AN INTRODUCTION BY GEORGE HOBELL
The life and letters of the dynamic Gertrude Bell, British administrator, military espionage, and travel writer, who is still today seen as a camel-riding, independent woman who turned her back on Victorian society to dedicate her life to the Arab cause, becoming the chief architect of British policy in the Middle East after World War I. Edited by the acclaimed Bell biographer Georgina Howell, author of Gertrude Bell: Queen of the Desert. Hobell offers a complete biography of Bell's life, including her role in mapping the region's borders and when, where and how she died. With more than a decade of experience reporting on the region, Secor narrates the history of Iran—the first revolutionary theocracy in modern times—as a story of individu-

MALCOLM C. LYONS, translator
Tales of the Marmelous and News of the Strange
The First English Translation of a Medieval Arabic Fantasy Collection
INTRODUCTION BY ROBERT PIRIE
A great work of Arabic literature, this much-loved horror novel from at least a millennium ago arrived in a single copy smuggled onto a library in England. Although some of its contents are intended for adults only, this edition—available for the first time in English—has been interspersed sparingly with clearly marked explanations to guide modern readers. A great cache of ancient, magical tales, these earliest-known Arabic short stories dating from at least a millennium ago...and their ability to take us into a [hidden] world….They offer insights...that countless treatises on 'the politics of Islam' or 'the future of the Middle East' cannot match.
